OTHER UPDATES:

Federal wildlife officials have signaled their preliminary approval for Idaho's petition to kill up to 60 endangered gray wolves from packs that have been preying heavily on big game herds in the upper Clearwater River Basin.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service published a draft environmental review on Feb 10, 2011 in which it proposed to approve a wolf hunt plan in the Lolo zone that had been submitted last August by Idaho Fish and Game. A similar petition from Montana - to remove 12 wolves in the Bitterroot Range - remains pending.
